FUTURE SCIENTISTS!

Written by Mark Haggett

It was a great week of learning in first grade!

This week, our story came to life as students went outside to explore the world around them using mini magnifying glasses.

After their exploring was complete, students used their observation skills to complete a worksheet. They drew and described what an object(s) looked like with their bare eye versus what they discovered looking through the magnifying glasses. Students did a wonderful job as a real scientist as well as making classroom connections to the world.
